

Libra: Opening Access to Alumni Theses and Dissertations

Final Grant Report, April 2017

This report details the work and accomplishments of a two-year project by the University of Virginia Library, funded by the Jefferson Trust, to show results of research across the institution, preserve access to valuable scholarship, and shepherd new and existing collections of research materials.

He who receives an idea from me, receives instruction himself without lessening mine; as he who lights his taper at mine, receives light without darkening mine.
- Thomas Jefferson to Isaac McPherson, 13 August 1813

Jefferson's thoughts on the sharing of ideas are as relevant today as in 1813. What has changed in 200 years are the vehicles through which ideas can be shared. Publishing has largely moved from print to electronic delivery methods over the past 20 years. Increasingly, access to content is also transitioning, as researchers take advantage of services which make scholarship available without cost to the end user. With open access to research and scholarship, authors and their peers may contribute to open scholarship, share and obtain work freely and with stability, as well as fulfill funding requirements for public access.

Project Summary

For users of the University Library, including students, alumni, and citizens of the world, the work funded by this project provides immediate access to works which previously required access to physical items. The project entailed enabling immediate online access to hundreds of the most in-demand, rare, and unique of the University's 30,000+ print theses and dissertations spanning 1885 to 2012. For alumni authors, opening the scholarship associated with their U.Va. degrees allows these alumni to access their own work from any computer, on-Grounds or off, and to share it with colleagues, employers, and peers, regardless of their distance from the physical University Library collection.

Total Expenditures

From the $58,350 two-year grant, a total of $57,189 has been spent to date, which includes $9,566 for wages and supplies and $47,623 for digitization. $1,161 remains from funds already disbursed to the Library, all of which will be used by August 2017 on student wages to complete author contact work.

Project Completion

All digitization and uploading of digitized theses and dissertations has been completed as of the date of this report. Because of quality problems with a portion of the files digitized by the vendor near the end of year 2, some author contact work will be completed over the summer of 2017 by a student employee. Funds already disbursed by Jefferson Trust remain in the Library's account to cover this work, which will conclude by August 2017.

Project Successes

- 440 unique titles processed for optical character recognition, digitized for both preservation and access within the U.Va. community, and placed into U.Va.'s Libra Institutional Repository and the Library's VIRGO catalog.
- 448 volumes scanned by contract vendor Backstage Library Works (98,568 pages)
- 17 volumes scanned by U.Va. Library due to condition or single copy (4,359 pages)

- 102,927 total pages scanned

The following are examples of highly requested print theses digitized with Jefferson Trust support, now available in Libra with worldwide open access (see Appendix A for full list):

Four Decades of Social Change: Scottsville, Virginia, 1820-1860, Karl Hess, 1973.
<https://doi.org/10.18130/V3BK89>

The cries of beleaguered angels: black and Chicano consciousness in Los Angeles, 1940-1970, Leiv Hamilton Blad, 1987. <https://doi.org/10.18130/V3CD2M>

Prince Edward County: the aftermath of voting rights litigation, Margot May Rogers, 1992. <https://doi.org/10.18130/V3D637>

The economic value of the ecosystem services of the Chesapeake Bay, Ryan Holtan, 2005.
<https://doi.org/10.18130/V3634Q>

Resource subsidies to arthropod food webs at a pond-forest boundary, Johanna Marie Kraus, 2006. <https://doi.org/10.18130/V3D336>

Author contact work has been another area of success. Authors are given the option to allow immediate worldwide access to their scholarship or for their work to remain available only to current U.Va. students, faculty, and staff. Scholarship placed in Libra on behalf of authors is deposited with U.Va.-only access until author permission for worldwide access is obtained. Student staff have already sent at least three requests to those authors who have yet not responded.

- The selection of items to digitize was based on scholarly demand and contribution to areas of collection strength. In addition, in the spring of 2014 the Library had over 1000 theses and dissertations transferred from CD-ROM into Libra.
- 1,311 authors were contacted by August 19, 2016, including the 220 authors of the works digitized in year 1. As of April 2017, multiple follow up emails have been sent to those authors who have not yet responded, and contact information has been located for the recently deposited 223 year 2 titles.
- A total of 466 (35.5%) authors have responded thus far. Of those responses, 420 (90%) of responding authors have opted to move their scholarship from U.Va.-only access to worldwide open access.
- Results far out performed our original expectation of 50% of respondents opting for worldwide open access. We expect numbers to continue to increase as contacts are made for the remaining 223 works digitized and deposited for year 2.

Challenges

Our original estimate of digitizing 1000 titles or 100,000 total pages of the most highly requested print theses and dissertations was adjusted early in the project due to higher than anticipated page counts for the most circulated titles. Our review of circulation statistics returned a greater number of lengthy dissertations and fewer shorter masters' theses. Armed with this knowledge, we pared down our list of documents to digitize to what we believed would be the most valuable to researchers based on past requests. We digitized over 100,000 pages as planned, which comprise the 440 titles (246 doctoral dissertations, 194 masters' theses) in Appendix A.

Final delivery of year 2 scans from the digitization vendor, Backstage Library Works, was delayed by several months because the digital files provided by the vendor did not meet the compression and quality criteria specified in the Library's contract with the vendor. All work was redone at no additional cost, but it took weeks of careful review and communication from project coordinator Lorrie Chisholm to resolve these issues. As a result, final upload of the completed scholarship occurred in mid-April 2017, rather than in early 2017 as planned. Contacting the year 2 cohort of 220 authors to secure their permission to open their work beyond the U.Va. community began on April 23, and will be completed by August 2017.

Project Staff

Over the course of the project, we had one staff member devoting 30% of her time to coordinating the project, one director serving as PI devoting 5%, and one Library IT programmer devoting 3%. In addition, four student employees (one per semester) worked an average of 10 hours per week.

Project Impact on Individuals

We will see the impact of this project for years to come, and it is thus unknown how many people will be affected over time.

We have anecdotal evidence of the impact of the project on participating students and alumni, from emailed responses to requests to open access to alumni work:

"Thanks for letting me know about this transition. I am fine with granting open access to my thesis - I checked the blank below, but wanted to confirm this in writing as well. Best of luck with transitioning the print/CDR materials to electronic files, and thanks again." - Phil Haberkern, PHD 2009.

"After I defended the dissertation, I made an attempt to secure permission from [Oxford University Press who published it], but the process at that time was paper-based and convoluted. I've been meaning to try again, and your email has given me the needed nudge. I'll approach Oxford again, and include distribution via Libra in the request. Until you hear from me, however, the dissertation will have to remain restricted. I hope to be in touch soon." - Helen Benet-Goodman, PHD 2004.

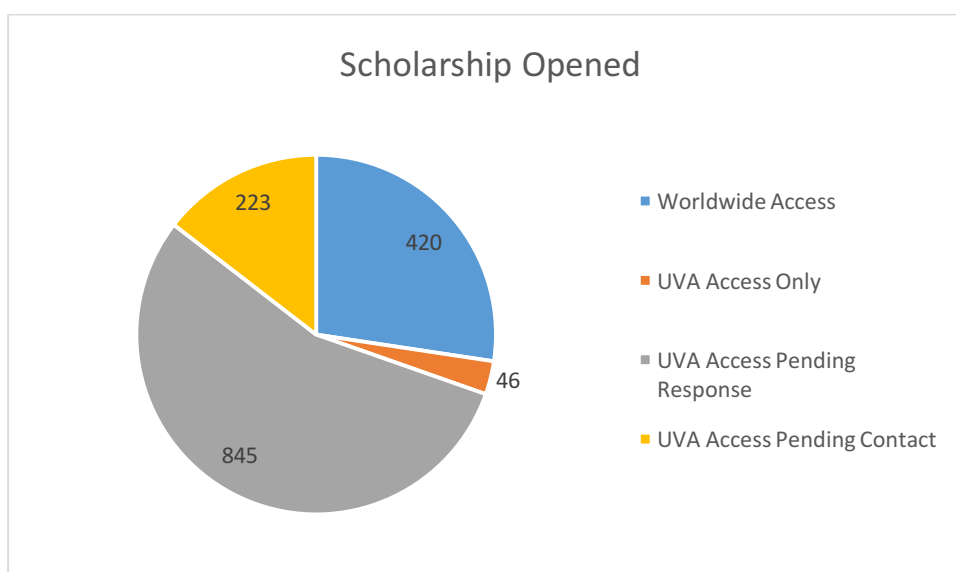

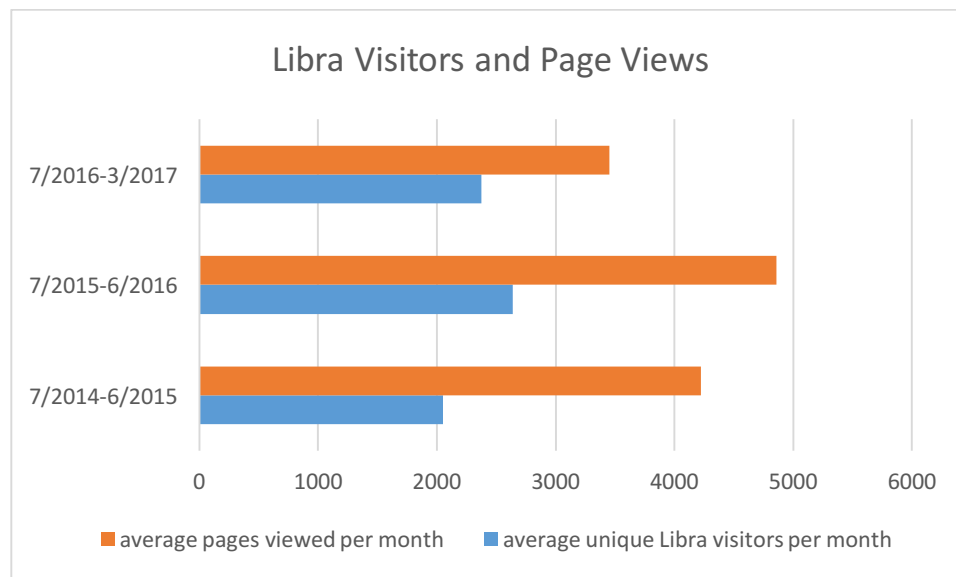

"Thanks for the email. I also have a doctoral dissertation I would like to open to worldwide access." - Crandal Shifflett, MA 1971, PHD 1975.

Project Impact on University

As a result of this project, Library work is more efficient and less costly:

"If the circulating copy of a dissertation or thesis is lost or missing, we are not making another copy and then cataloging it anymore. Our new procedure is to pull the archival copy, scan the copy for Libra, which then makes the title available on grounds and eventually to the world. This means access without a lot of expensive copying, cataloging, binding and storage." - Donna Barbour, U.Va. Library's Retrieval, Lending, and Scanning Manager

U.Va. scholarship is increasingly accessed by researchers worldwide:

- 90% of respondents (420 of 466) have opted to make their U.Va. scholarship immediately open for worldwide access.
- Of the remaining 1068 authors, responses are pending from 845 authors already contacted, and 223 (year 2 titles) will receive their initial contact from our U.Va. student employee by August, 2017.
- All of the digitized titles are available in Libra with U.Va.-only access until author permission for worldwide access is secured.

Post Grant Plans

This project has succeeded in digitizing and making accessible online the most frequently requested print theses and dissertations by U.Va. alumni as of 2017. Instead of mass digitization of the remaining theses and dissertations in our print collection, this grant has provided a workflow and request mechanism for digitization-on-demand of U.Va. theses and dissertations from the print collection. These efforts are being absorbed by existing library services as part of Interlibrary Loan and Scholarly Repository Services. We have already been able to digitize 156 print theses and dissertations requested for loan since 2016 in house. Most are now available online in Libra with either U.Va.-only or worldwide open access, per the wishes of each alumni author contacted.

Other Comments

The Library is grateful for the generous support of the Jefferson Trust for this and other projects funded by the Trust in the past, and we look forward to new collaborations in the future.
